

Carmine's Opens Tomorrow

By Ashley, 2:34 pm August 2nd, 2010

Photo Courtesy of Carmine's

Penn Quarter is about to get a lot more delizioso. Carmine's, the New York chain, is opening it's first Washington location on 7th Street tomorrow. The restaurant will be a massive 20,000+ square feet, and will seat 700 patrons at a time, with a 40-seat bar and nine private rooms.

The menu is offered in family style portions and they will have all the favorites from their New York locations on the D.C. menu. Look for the eggplant parmigiana, homemade meatballs, chicken saltimbocca and seafood fra diavolo. And no Italian meal is complete without the dessert, so try and leave room for the cheesecake, Tiramisu, or the chocolate covered cannolis.

Though they brought a lot of the New York charm down with the restaurant, the new location has the D.C. power broker's interests in mind. The restaurant will be equipped with Wi-Fi and USB ports in their lounge area. Perfect for getting your work done mid-meal, because after a giant plate of their linguine and clam sauce, all you'll want to do is take a nap.
